Dozens of Perry County elementary school students gathering today at Judson College for an APPLE-solutely great health and nutrition education program

Who: SAGE Dining Services® in partnership with Judson College's Department of Education and Social Sciences Division

When: Today, Oct. 9, 2015, 11:00 a.m.- 11:35 a.m.

Where: Sara Hunt Christenberry Dining Hall
Judson College 203 Bibb Street
Marion, AL 36756

What: “Apple Day: Cutting to the Core” is designed to teach area third-graders about apples. SAGE Dining and Judson College are partnering with the third-grade classes from Francis Marion School and Marion Academy to bring health and nutrition into kids' lives.

SAGE will serve a free lunch in the Sara Hunt Christenberry Dining Hall featuring SAGE's Educational Seasoning, “An Abundance of Apples.” There will be plenty of foods highlighting apples, as well as a variety of apples to sample and educational handouts.

SAGE Team Members will be available to discuss all things apples including cooking methods, the history of this popular fruit and local sourcing – how knowing where your food comes from is both good for you, and good for the economy.
